TEAMS RULED OUT ON PROTEST

Distinguished Marksman Match | Minor League Magnates to Work | Won by Major Bell.

ONE WEEK FOR PRACTICE LATEST BASE BALL NEWS

The annual rifle matches of the District of Columbia National Guard and the fifth annual meeting of the National Rifle Assoclation closed late yesterday afternoon at the Ordway range. The wind-up of the meeting was witnessed by a large number of interested spectators, including Col. Theodore Mosher, adjutant general of the District of Columbia militia. When the firing had ended it was announced that Major James E. Bell, inspector general of rifle practice, District of Columbia militia, had won the distinguished marksman's match. that First Lieut. Frank W. Holt had won the Gerstenberg trophy match and the revolver match, that First Lieut. W. M. Farrow had won the members' match and that Major Glendie B. Young, 3d Battalion, had won the Revolver Association match.

In the distinguished marksman match Major Bell, his son, Lieut. Horace M. Bell; Private Maurice Appleby and Lieut. H. H. Leizear each scored a total of 75 out of a possible 100, but Major Bell earned the prize by reason of having made the highest score at the longest distance.

The highest total in the Gerstenberg trophy match was made by Lieutenant Farrow. Private E. J. Fink of Company A, Gerstenberg Trophy Match.

1st Battalion, rolled up the second highest total. These two guardsmen, however, did not reach the range until late in the day and commenced their work in the competition at the 600-yard range. At the conclusion of the match a protest against Farrow and Fink was entered on the ground that the rules provided that the score must be fired over the shortest range first. The prize was therefore awarded to Lieutenant Holt, who had the remaining highest score. Lieut. Farrow's score in the members' In the revolver match Lieut. Holt's total

Major Young won the association revolver match with a total of 157.

Not Eligible to Shoot.

Lieut. P. W. Smith, one of the range offithe teams with which Sergt. C. E. Groome and Private R. L. Pile competed were not eligible to any position which they may have won. Lieut. Smith explains the matter in a communication to Major Bell, the executive officer, as follows:

"A formal protest having been made to me to the effect that Sergt. Groome and Private Pile were not members of Company B. 4th Battalion, D. C. N. G., and that therefore the teams with which they competed were not eligible to any position which they may have won, I have investigated the matter and have been officially informed by the adjutant of the 2d Regiment that no order has as yet been issued transferring them from the 6th Battalion to the 4th Battalion. I have therefore decided that the company and battalion teams of which they were members were improperly constituted and not eligible to any position which they may have won in the contests in which they were entered. The Ordway range will be closed for the season next Saturday. Major Bell an-nounces that all those who have not yet completed the required practice must do so by the time indicated. The regular days for range practice are Tuesday, Thursday

All French citizens interested in the future of the east will assiduously read the pamphlet now published, which advocates an intimate union between France and Russia to fix the destinies of the east. The author foresees the speedy dissolution of the Turkish empire, and discusses the consequences of this grave event | son, signed a St. Louis contract yesterday

The dream was dispelled by the accession of Queen Victoria in the following year. England then became the cordial ally of Louis Philippe, notwithstanding the dregs of anglophobia left in France. The same "entente" was emphasized by the Crimean war, and by the outburst of sentiment in favor of Poland. Taking Cronstadt, Toulon and the first visit of the czar in succession, it appears certain that the Franco-Russian alliance, as it now stands, may be interpreted as anti-English, notwithstanding its pacific intent. It is, of course, purely defensive "in ovo." Yet it is well to observe that the military convenis well to observe that the military convention of 1897 specified Germany as the only prospective source of aggression, just as the Austro-German treaty, which forms part of the triple alliance, limited the contract to Russia. The omission of Germany in what may be called the treaty of Complegne need not awaken suspicion; but it is certainly noteworthy at a moment when England is following out her path of racial expansion under the strain of far-off hosexpansion under the strain of far-off hos-tilities. Nothing can indicate more clearly that Nicholas II is the bearer of a friendly message from Germany to France in the interests of European peace, but not with-out grave possibilities in the future. It is estimated that the four days passed by the czar and czaritsa in France will cost a matter of f150,000. The actual credit opened was for 196,000, but that will have to be supplemented. It must be acknowl-edged that some of the items were unnec-essary. No less than 3,000 rare volumes essary. No less than 3,000 rare volumes were taken away from the Bibliotheque Nationale and other priceless collections to form a library for the emperor, who is known not to have more than an ordinary taste for reading, and who had scarcely an hour to himself during his eventful visit.

OLD IMP BACK IN FORM AGAIN

Under Ten-Year Agreement.

Miss Sophia Starr of the Huntingdon Valley Country Club yesterday defeated Miss Elsie Cassatt of the Merion Cricket Club in the final round for the woman's individual golf championship of Philadelphia by one up in nineteen holes. The contest was exciting throughout. Miss Cassatt won the first hole five against six, but Miss Starr evened up matters in the next hole.

On the out journey Miss Starr turned the lead by two up, and on the return Miss Cassatt had a run of bad luck, which put her farther in the rear.

It was not until the twelfth hole that Miss Cassatt was seen to advantage. This she won in five, Miss Starr taking six. This was Miss Cassatt's first victory since the fifth hole.

By brilliant work she halved the next, and on the fourteenth hole, which Miss Starr won, Miss Cassatt was two down and four to go. The fifteenth hole went to Miss Cassatt, who was but one behind her op-ponent, and on the sixteenth Miss Cassatt again won out, making all square. Each then won a hole, and required a nineteenth to decide the contest. Miss Cassatt was in very poor form, while Miss Starr was on the green with her fourth and made an excellent put, winning the championship by one up in nineteen holes.

Extra hole-Miss Cassatt, 7; Miss Starr, 5.

CHEVY CHASE GOLF TOURNEY.

Unusual Array of Talent Will Take Part in the Club's Fall Event. Next Thursday, Friday and Saturday the annual fall golf tournament of the Chevy Chase club will be held, and from present indications it will be the most successful in the history of the organization. The tournament is open to all members of the United States Golf Association and such other players as may be invited. The summer trips of Messrs. Horstman, Hitt and McCammon cers during the meeting, has decided that of the Chevy Chase club and Messrs. Harban and McKinley of the Columbia club resulted in bringing the local organizations into prominence, and as a result several of the most skillful golfers of the country promised to participate in the coming Chevy Chase tournament. So far Findley Douglas, conceded to be next to Travis, the amateur champion, in playing strength; W. C. Carnegie of Pittsburg, who dld so well in the Atlantic City tourney; Patrick Grant of the Brookline, Mass., club; C. H. Seeley of the Wee Burn club; Bruce Price of Tuxedo and John Reid of St. Andrew's club have signified their intention of taking part with the Chevy Chase players. Several other notable golfers may turn up to participate in the tourney should their engagements permit. If this array of outside talent par-ticipates in the Chevy Chase tournament it will require sensational work from the District's best golfers to keep the cups offered

The best players of the Columbia, Washington and Dumbarton golf clubs will enter the tournament, and with proper handicaps and their usual good playing should give a good account of themselves.

The Chevy Chase club will probably lose the services of Ormsby, McCammon and Lafferty, two of the cleverest players in the District, both of whom are just recovering from a serious illness and will not be in condition to play anything like their best game. Horstman, Hitt and Denny of the Chevy Chase club and Dr. Lee Harban and James McKinley are in rare form at present, and upon these players the task will fall of keeping one or more of the cups at home.

Should the pleasant weather of the past two weeks continue through the tournament the largest gallery that has gathered at Chevy Chase for years will probably be on hand. The course is in almost perfect condition and the chances are that "Colonel Bogy" will be beaten out frequently.

Manager Donovan Signs Him for the St. Louis Team. A special from Kansas City says that Johnny Farrell, who played center field with Manning's Washington club last seato play second base next year. The price stipulated is $2,500, or $800 more than he received from Manning. Farrell is also to receive $400 advance money.

Manager Manning offered Farrell $500 increase for next season, but he refused to sign. Jack did all his playing for the Senators after Quinn dropped out. Before that he was awfully weak at the bat and in the field, but in the last six months he certainly looked strong and had all the earmarks of a comer. Farrell made many friends in Washington by his gentlemanly manners. Manager Donovan can be congratulated upon getting a good man to take Dick Padden's place.

In the continuous handicap tourney, open only to members of the local chess club, the additional entries this week are Messrs. C. H. Turner, V. Sournin, Captain Jas. Mr. Guthrie would like to play; Mr. Smith would do so if the chance came his way, and Mr. Sournin has a verbal challenge in. Mr. Hanna has the first chance by the terms of his surrender of the championship to the captain last spring, if he finds the chance to play. Mr. Walker, by his record, would seem to have the next turn if he desires it.

The lists of the correspondence match between New York and Pennsylvania have been completed and stand at the great figure of 230 to a side. (c) It was to be foreseen that White would seek to continue the attack by means of Kt—Kt4 and P—B5. Black could have forestalled both these moves by playing B—B before playing P—B3 and exchanging the Kt If it plays to Kt4.

(d) Quite right. It was useless to attempt to defend the compromised Queen's side; White was, therefore, justified in abandoning it, and making un his mind to cither do or die on the King's side.

(e) To make room for Kt—B4, which, besides attacking the Bishop, would threaten Kt—Kt6 ch. The move also serves this important object, that it brings the Rook in a line with his Queen's side Pawns.

Pawns.

(f) It might have been worth while for Black to stay his Queen's side operations for a moment, in order to play P-R3, which move, though not with-out its cangers, would have gained some little out its dangers, would have gained some little time by compelling White to play Q-Kt3, P-R4, time by compelling White to play Q-Kt3, P-R4, etc.

(g) In any case, both players have treated us to magnificent specimens of play in their own particular way, and White played KtxB in furtherance of the beautiful idea which he will presently develop, it being important that the Black Rook should not be able to retire to Rook's square for the protection of the King.

(h) Played with desperate ingenuity, and producing a combination far out of the common run, which forces the game in a few moves.
